Collecting, preserving and communicating the history of Cheshire County

Show the community you care about the history of Cheshire County - become a sponsor

For 93 years the Historical Society of Cheshire County has been connecting people of the Monadnock Region with local history stories. In 2020, when the only thing we could be certain of was uncertainty, our staff of six people did whatever it took to collect, preserve, and communicate local history that could be relevant and useful to the public. In 2021, we will continue to help people of all ages “find their place in history.”

A series of “Viral Stories” by Alan F. Rumrill received a very positive response from the community for connecting the pandemic to various aspects of local history.

One hundred years ago, women around the country won the right to vote with the passage of the 19th amendment. A new section on our website celebrates empowered women from a local perspective. Also, a history-on-the-streets walking tour highlights empowered women from the community and shares one city’s involvement with a national movement.

Walking tours of the Walldogs murals in downtown Keene have been very popular. For local history stories behind the murals, go to <https://hscen.org/walldogs-murals/>.
