In 1907, 13-year old Ernest Beliveau wrote home to his mother in Keene from the Y.M.C.A. summer camp he was attending at Granite Lake in Munsonville, N.H. “When he took the picture I was looking at a stick. Hope for a letter soon. Address like this. Ernest Beliveau, Y.M.C.A. camp. Ma, will you send up twenty five cents because I have only ten cents left.”

For generations, summer camps have been an important moment in the lives of millions of children across America. Participating in one of these extended-stay experiences in nature is regarded as a rite of passage in a child’s journey into young adulthood. The origin of summer camps finds its home in the northeast and almost half of the camps established in the nineteenth century were located in New Hampshire.

From its earliest days in the 1880s, youth summer camps were an integral part in a ‘back-to-nature’ trend that spread across society. They offered solace from the fast-paced urban society that had developed following the Civil War and Industrial Revolution. Camps helped parents address growing anxieties about how all of the changes in society were impacting the growth and development of their children.

As the 20th century progressed, the number of summer camps in the United States exploded. In 1900, there were about 40 camps nationwide (12 of which were located in New Hampshire). By 1965, that number had grown to approximately 13,000 youth camps in the US with 200 to 250 of them located in New Hampshire. Continued on page 2:
Cheshire County has not only seen its fair share of summer camps but this region has also played a role in the earliest development of the industry. The Historical Society’s research has uncovered approximately 75 youth summer camps in operation in Cheshire County since 1885. Many of those camps are still in operation today.

Hello Mother, Hello Father: a History of Summer Camps in the Monadnock Region explores the story of this national pastime from a local lens. Hundreds of historic photographs, artifacts, and documents related to youth summer camps will be included. Collectively, these items lend themselves to a national narrative about the ever-changing thoughts and perceptions related to childhood and childhood play.

Leading up to the exhibit’s opening, the Historical Society of Cheshire County is hosting two programs in collaboration with Camp Takodah of Richmond, NH. On Monday, April 24, 2023 at 7:00 pm, following the Society’s annual meeting, Graeme Noseworthy, President of Camp Takodah, will present a history of the camp. On Sunday, May 21st, at 1:00 pm, Society guests are invited to take a tour of the camp and try out some of the more popular activities enjoyed by youth today.

The exhibit Hello Mother, Hello Father opens on Friday, May 26, 2023. The public is invited to view the show between 4:00 and 6:00 pm and sample some summer camp-themed treats. More programming will follow this summer including a movie night with some early 20th century films discovered at a former camp in Nelson, a presentation on summer camps in Stoddard and Nelson by Alan Rumrill, and a pop-up exhibit on summer camps, during which the public can bring an item representing their own summer camp experiences to share and display.

DAVID R. PROPER
LEGACY SOCIETY

David R. Proper was a schoolteacher, librarian, historian, author, and a member of the Historical Society of Cheshire County for 65 years.

The Historical Society of Cheshire County invites you to join the David R. Proper Legacy Society if you intend to include the Historical Society in your will or as a beneficiary of one of your investments. Estate planning can help bring you peace of mind, knowing that your loved ones and the organizations you treasure will be cared for. Today the Historical Society of Cheshire County stands on a solid foundation that has been built in part by legacy gifts.

A legacy gift can take many forms:

- You can include the Historical Society of Cheshire County in your will or estate plan with a bequest gift. You can designate the Historical Society of Cheshire County as a beneficiary of a life insurance policy or a retirement plan.
- You can give a qualified charitable distribution (QCD) from an IRA.
- You can give a gift of appreciated stock.
- You can set up a life income gift such as a charitable gift annuity that provides annual income payments to you and ultimately benefits the Historical Society of Cheshire County.

In many cases, a planned gift can help you avoid income taxes or estate taxes, accomplish your philanthropic goals, and provide the greatest benefit for you and the Historical Society of Cheshire County. The Society is happy to work with you and your financial advisor to establish a legacy gift. Please reach out to Rick Swanson, rswanson@hsccnh.org, 603-352-1895 with questions, comments, or feedback.

2022 Annual Report
Director’s Message

In recent years our annual reports have described how the Historical Society of Cheshire County has implemented state-of-the-art technology to enhance and expand programming, research, and collections care. The Society now presents remote and hybrid programming and offers digital versions of many of its programs on YouTube and Vimeo. We are placing library catalogs, artifact catalogs, and digital versions of our exhibits online. We have also digitized thousands of images and manuscripts and have updated collection storage spaces. All these developments have helped to preserve our collections and expand our audience.

Despite these important and advantageous adaptations, the organization protects and preserves hundreds of thousands of items that cannot immediately be made available in electronic format. We have discovered in recent years that a large percentage of genealogists and other researchers mistakenly believe that they can find all the resources they need on the internet.

The collections of the Historical Society of Cheshire County contain approximately 300,000 items. We have been able to digitize about 20,000 of those objects to make them more easily accessible. However, that means that 280,000 items, or about 93 percent of the collections, are available only at the society or by contacting the organization. We like to say that those 300,000 items tell 300,000 stories. We continue to encourage researchers and the public to visit, experience those stories in person, and find their place in Cheshire County history.

The Society undertook significant work on organizational policies over the last year to improve the ways it preserves and shares these collections and stories. A new five-year strategic plan focuses on increased or enhanced use of technology, marketing, staffing and development procedures. We will also work to further improve collection management procedures. Most importantly, the Society will implement ways to enhance and expand the reach and impact of the 150 programs it offers each year.

We are in the midst of a project to develop an organizational interpretive plan that will be used to guide our programming and the use of our facilities in the future. The Society owns three facilities of different ages that host a wide variety of activities. We are working with a consultant to develop objectives for unified interpretation and educational activities to ensure that we use the resources of the organization to connect with visitors in a meaningful way. We are also completing a state-of-the-art technology project that will greatly enhance and improve the quality of our in-person, remote, and hybrid programming activities.

This behind-the-scenes work will allow the Society to continue sharing its timely and diverse schedule of programs. Over the past year we shared some of our 300,000 stories through dozens of lectures, classes, school tours, exhibits, teacher workshops, summer camps, and walking tours. The Society prepared and offered numerous programs on historic topics that remain especially relevant now in the 21st century. Popular programming focused on women’s history, Native American history, Black history, immigration history, and human impact on the environment. In a rapidly changing world, the Historical Society of Cheshire County strives to share history that is relevant and meaningful for today and that may help guide members of the current generation as they plan for the future.
